FROM_TIGER

As we look back on 2010, I feel tremendous pride at the accomplishments of the students, teachers and staff who worked hard every day to make a difference in our communities.

The TWLC in Anaheim enjoyed an impressive increase in attendance, and we also celebrated the opening of two new campuses in Washington, D.C. I'm happy to say these combined efforts impacted more than 14,000 young people and their families. We also saw exciting progress with the Earl Woods Scholarship Program, as our first class of scholars all became seniors in 2010. I can't believe they've already come this far, and I am looking forward to celebrating their graduation.

Lastly, I would like to thank our generous board members, sponsors and individual donors who helped the Foundation expand its reach in 2010. Your guidance and support have been instrumental to our success, and we are all very grateful.

Thank you again for your commitment to the Tiger Woods Foundation.

SINCERELY

TIGER WOODS // FOUNDER, TIGER WOODS FOUNDATION

I was quite hesitant about our first meeting. This was not the conventional scholarship and my experience as an Earl Woods Scholar did not end with a check in the mail. Rather, I was given a mentor, a man whom I would grow to respect, who changed the way I perceived my future. It is no exaggeration that this particular coffee shop in Westwood is a place where inspiration struck me more than once.

My first meeting with Andy Bielanski was a mixture of excitement and anxiety. But after multiple meetings, I became more comfortable and our conversations became more sincere. He told me about his travels to Third World countries and how they helped him gain a deeper understanding of their plight. He spoke passionately about promoting education and helping those who are less fortunate. His words inspired me to partake in my own trip and fused my passion to help others with my desire to learn more about myself. I took his advice to heart and joined a medical mission trip to Vietnam, where my parents are from.

Thus began my membership at an organization in Orange County called Medical, Educational Missions and Outreach (M.E.M.O.). The organization is a small group of doctors and students with a mission to provide medical, financial and educational support for the impoverished people of Vietnam. Throughout our two weeks in rural Vietnam, we donated money to orphanages and schools, held free clinics and watched American doctors perform life-saving surgeries for patients who could not afford the treatments.

In Vietnam, I had the opportunity to learn the lessons of humility: to be grateful for the smallest treasures of life. Before this trip, I was oblivious to the lives of my people. The comfort of my everyday life made me distant from my culture, a piece of my identity. The M.E.M.O. trip not only filled the void, but also affected my thoughts, aspirations and passions. Thus began my role as the president of the M.E.M.O. chapter at UCLA. With a team of passionate students, we combined our diligence with our passion to carry out fundraising projects to help this great cause.

Looking back at the trip, my talks with Andy Bielanski and the Tiger Woods Foundation, I have discovered a binding similarity, that there are amazing causes and people in the world who will stand up for the underdog. As the M.E.M.O. President, I constantly strive to help those who have never had a voice.

As I quickly move back into the fast paced life of college, I have found a purpose, which provides me the energy to study and continue with M.E.M.O. With the knowledge that a small thought could grow with such momentum, I bring this small piece of Vietnam home, only to return in the following summers in full bloom.

To think, this all started over a cup of coffee with my mentor.

GOICOCHEA

The first time I entered the Tiger Woods Learning Center was in my sophomore year of high school. I was amazed with not only the wonderful building itself, but the great assistance provided to me. I never imagined how much I would come to benefit from this creative atmosphere. Through my time at the Tiger Woods Learning Center, I have been given many opportunities including an introduction to many different courses and access to new technology. The Tiger Woods Learning Center's innovative atmosphere that consists of an extraordinary staff, excellent college presentations, and successful guest speakers have all inspired me to go attend college myself.

It's due to the extraordinary staff and the great example they portray that I have become more motivated to get a good college education. Through the first class I took, Engineering, with Mr. Esmilla, I was able to work and interact with other students through hands-on instruction. I have learned that the real world isn't all about tests and essays. I felt like I was exposed to an environment similar to a college classroom setting. Mr. Esmilla has motivated me to get a college education by introducing me to possible careers that only a college education can offer.

Growing up, I thought the best schools I could ever go to were USC and UCLA, but the Tiger Woods Learning Center has opened my eyes to many other schools, such as Stanford, Princeton, Cornell, Vanderbilt, Colgate, Hamilton, Boston College and many others. I have become more aware of what colleges look for in a student and the many different choices I have.

The professional guest speakers that have spoken at the TWLC have also been motivational. Their education has presented them with numerous opportunities and their stories have pushed me to continue working hard in school and focus on getting into one of my dream colleges. For example, Robin Richards, a successful entrepreneur, got me really excited about business as a college major. He talked to us about his college education, and how without it, he wouldn't have been able to get so far in life and accomplish all he has done. He mentioned how we don't have to get into the top college, or be the top percent of our school, but that it is very important to get a college education, that it is now almost essential to our futures. These types of presentations are just another one of the great opportunities that I was given as a TWLC scholar.

The Tiger Woods Learning Center has been essential to my growth as a student and has exposed me to countless opportunities. I am now incredibly ambitious about college and my future career.

How would my life be different if I wasn't an Earl Woods Scholar? Unlike other scholarships, the Earl Woods Scholarship is not just a name or a mysterious agency that writes checks to students it doesn't know. Being an Earl Woods Scholar has been so much more than that. It has been an experience, one that I am fortunate to be a part of.

I didn't know what being an Earl Woods Scholar meant. I remember filling out the scholarship application along with a million others, and totally forgetting I even applied. A few months later, a big package from the Tiger Woods Foundation arrived in the mail. Inside, a letter said that I had to attend a week-long, summer orientation. Frankly, I thought, "Great, another boring, obvious orientation about being the best I can be. Pppffft! Kiddy stuff!" But I went anyway and was proved completely wrong.

That first summer was amazing. I volunteered at a zoo, helped an elderly woman paint her home, rubbed elbows with community leaders and interned at the Tiger Woods Learning Center. I hope to become a writer one day, and over the summer, I was presented with the opportunity to intern at the Children and Families Commission of Orange County, where I got to write press releases and was even given the responsibility of co-managing their booth at the Orange County Fair. Interning has taught me so much. It taught me to appreciate the value of things that once seemed so trivial—things like what a difference a clean, white shirt can make, or the importance of writing a small thank you note. Now, I feel more confident and ready to take on the professional world.

However, out of the whole Earl Woods Scholarship experience, what I find most meaningful are all the great people I've met along the way. This is my third year being a Scholar, and the program and the people associated with it never cease to amaze me. If I wasn't an Earl Woods Scholar, I wouldn't have met my mentor Paul Glowienke, who has become more than a coach but also a great friend. There are too many other names to mention, but they know who they are. I can't even begin to thank them enough for the support and encouragement I've received. The folks at the Foundation and Learning Center understand what we scholars are trying to do, and their belief in us makes a whole world of difference. A little bit of confidence can go a long way, and this program has given me so much more.

I was in High School, and the pressure of graduation and passing all my classes was getting to me when my advisor told me, “Fatou, I want you to apply for the Earl Woods Scholarship. You need money for college.” The first thought that came in my mind was “Yeah right ... and you think I will get that competitive scholarship?” I talked to my mentors about the idea, and they encouraged me to apply. They wanted me to beat the odds. A couple of months later, I was an Earl Woods Scholar.

I came to the United States a couple of years ago with my sister from Togo (West Africa) to pursue a better education. Being an Earl Woods Scholar is the best thing that has happened to me since I got here. It is true that I was awarded other academic scholarships that help me to pay for college expenses, but I consider the Earl Woods Scholarship ‘the best.’ It does not just award money to go to school. The staff of the Foundation keeps in touch with me and makes sure I am doing well in school. As an Earl Woods Scholar, a lot of opportunities opened up for me.

As a scholar, my biggest accomplishment has been to intern at the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) in Washington, D.C. The Tiger Woods Foundation has blessed me with this chance to work with EPA staff members and to understand what it feels like to work on projects. I worked on the mercury spills that occurred at high schools in Washington, D.C. and Arizona. As a junior at the University of Idaho majoring in Environmental Science/Engineering, I learned a lot from this internship. I had the chance to interview other EPA staff members from different regions who were involved in the cleanups and come up with a suggestion for the EPA concerning spills. I received positive feedback on my dedication to work and also on the results of my project.

Every time I tell my dad and my sister how good the Tiger Woods Foundation has been to me, they share in my happiness. On October 5, 2010, I had the chance to participate in a special assembly with Tiger Woods himself and speak with 9th graders of Cesar Chavez High School about the benefits of having a Tiger Woods Learning Center in Washington, D.C. As an Earl Woods Scholar, opportunities keep arising, and I consider every one of them a gift. I would have never thought of myself, a young man coming from the small country of Togo, sitting on a panel with Tiger Woods one day. Being an Earl Woods Scholar helped me to achieve my dreams and only God knows the opportunities that this Foundation will present to me in the future.

Attending college is my dream. To me, college means success. I love learning, and I feel that going to college will broaden my horizons and open new doors for me.

Through the support of the Tiger Woods Learning Center, the picture I have in my mind about college has broadened and become more colorful. I use the Learning Center not only as one of my main resources for getting information about colleges, but I have also learned different values of life such as integrity, honesty and sportsmanship. At the Learning Center, I am continuously able to hone these qualities as well as gain new ones that are beneficial to my life.

College means much more to me than merely an education. I want to reach my highest potential and be a positive example to my siblings and family. Throughout my life my father has shared with me all his personal memories and experiences, and knowing his background inspires me to shape my life in the right direction. He had to drop out of grade school to help his parents work so they could feed his family. By the age of sixteen my father was on his own without guidance, on the streets of Los Angeles living under a cardboard box. Without his perseverance and confidence, my father would not be standing where he is today, supporting his family. His stories along with the support of the Tiger Woods Learning Center have given me confidence and encouraged me to be successful on the road to college.

At the Tiger Woods Learning Center, I have met many great people who have already gone through the college process. I want to go to college and make a difference like them; to later lend a helping hand to others. I see myself helping others in fields such as criminal justice, sociology or psychology.

The Learning Center has helped me maintain focus on what is important and because of that I have gained a better sense of involvement. I feel that the Tiger Woods Learning Center is valuable in painting my picture for college.

PROGRAMS

At the Tiger Woods Learning Centers in Orange County and Washington, D.C., scholars in grades 5 – 12 experience college access programs focused on science, technology, engineering and math.

Interactive classes in subjects ranging from rocketry, aerospace engineering and marine biology to graphic design and communications, allow our students to explore a future in almost any career and recognize the importance of attending college. In 2010, the Learning Center in Orange County reached 14,000 students and families, a 75% growth over 2009. We also researched, developed and launched the Fit Plan, a step-by-step curriculum for Living Healthy. This plan helps young people incorporate nutrition and fitness into their daily lives and teaches them practical lessons on food labels and exercise.

TWLC ANAHEIM

In October of 2010, we celebrated the official expansion of the Tiger Woods Learning Center with the launch of two campuses in Washington, D.C. 🏛️

The two TWLC-DC campuses are located at the Cesar Chavez Public Charter School in Ward 6, and the Cesar Chavez Public Charter School in Ward 7. The TWLC-DC spaces and curriculum are custom-built for the young people in that community, providing students in multiple wards access to innovative programs and the latest technology. Each campus is run by TWLC-DC staff with the curriculum focusing on career exploration in science, technology, engineering, math and communications, as well as providing mentoring and teacher training. Students attending the TWLC-DC experience a technology-rich, innovative and highly motivated environment that has been integral to the success of the Southern California location. Activities include building and programming robots, exploring outer space and creating their own films.

SCHOLARSHIP PROGRAM

With the support of the Earl Woods Scholarship Program, our scholars are able to make their dreams of going to college a reality.

In addition to a $20,000 scholarship, our scholars receive a dedicated mentor and specialized internships which help prepare them for life after college. The Earl Woods Scholarship Program also provides an unparalleled support network that covers things often taken for granted, like money for books, a plane ticket home or a new winter coat. Scholarships are awarded based on academic achievement, demonstrated financial need and a proven commitment to community service. In 2010, we awarded 11 new college scholarships bringing the total number of scholars to 35. Our scholars, many of whom are first-generation college students, are currently attending prestigious universities such as Harvard, Georgetown, UC Berkley and UCLA.

The TWF Grants Program annually supports organizations that specialize in education and youth development. Grants are awarded up to $25,000 and target communities where TWF has a strong presence through programs, events or sponsor relations. Recently, as part of Tiger's aspiration to positively impact youth around the world, TWF began funding organizations internationally. Grants have been awarded to nonprofit organizations in Korea, Thailand and China that provide programs in education, youth development, leadership and financial literacy.

FUNDRAISING EVENTS_

Welcoming 120 of the world's best golfers and nearly 200,000 fans to Aronimink Golf Club, the AT&T National celebrated an excellent first year in the Philadelphia region with tremendous support from the local community. ✈️

This highly anticipated event kicked off with a patriotic opening ceremony which paid tribute to the men and women who serve in the military. The ceremony began with the Philadelphia Fife and Drum Corps, followed by the Presentation of Colors by the Joint Armed Forces Color Guard. Grammy Award-Winning Philly locals, Boyz II Men, took the stage to sing the National Anthem, with singer-songwriter, Jon Bon Jovi, on hand to represent his Jon Bon Jovi Soul Foundation. The AT&T National also donated 30,000 tickets so members of the military could attend the tournament for free.

Justin Rose took home the newly designed Liberty Bell trophy on Sunday, finishing with a one shot lead over hard-charging Ryan Moore. Rose closed with an even-par 70 to hold off Moore, who finished with a 5-under 65. Rose's rounds of 69-64-67-70 and total of 10-under 270 proved to be just enough for him to record the second PGA TOUR victory of his career and claim the $1.16 million winner's check.

The warm welcome by the Philadelphia community, the dedicated volunteers and the support of the media helped raise funds for numerous youth organizations including the primary tournament beneficiaries, the Jon Bon Jovi Soul Foundation, the Boys & Girls Clubs of Philadelphia and the Tiger Woods Foundation.

The 2010 Chevron World Challenge, held at beautiful Sherwood Country Club in Thousand Oaks, Calif., featured one of the most elite fields of the year, amazing weather, record crowds, great community support and an extremely exciting ending.

Sunday's fans were treated to a thrilling finish as Graeme McDowell sank a 20-foot birdie-putt on the first playoff hole to edge Tiger Woods and take home the 2010 trophy.

Both Woods and McDowell birdied the 72nd hole to force the first playoff in tournament history. They finished regulation tied at 16-under 272. Paul Casey came up third with a 69 at 12-under 276, and Rory McIlroy was fourth at 11-under 277 after turning in a 68.

Other standout players in the field included Steve Stricker, Jim Furyk, Luke Donald, Matt Kuchar, Ian Poulter, Hunter

Mahan, Anthony Kim, Zach Johnson, Sean O'Hair, Dustin Johnson, Bubba Watson, Camilo Villegas, Nick Watney and Stewart Cink.

The Chevron World Challenge welcomed approximately 65,000 spectators throughout the four days of the tournament and enjoyed its highest television ratings since 2007. The tournament worked to raise awareness for its nonprofit partners, which included DonorsChoose.org, Project Lead the Way, Teach For America, TELACU Education Foundation and the Tiger Woods Foundation.
